

COVID-19 Testing

How and where to get tested – and when it's most appropriate.

What are common symptoms of COVID-19?

According to the Centers for Disease Control, people with COVID-19 can have a wide range of symptoms. Symptoms can be mild to severe and may appear 2-14 days after exposure to the virus.

You may have COVID-19 if you have:

- Fever or chills
- Cough
- Shortness of breath or difficulty breathing
- Fatigue
- Muscle or body aches
- Headache
- New loss of taste or smell
- Sore throat
- Congestion or runny nose
- Nausea or vomiting
- Diarrhea

Should I get tested for COVID-19?

Discuss your symptoms or concerns with your primary care physician and he or she will refer you for testing, if appropriate.

Testing may be ordered if:

- You have symptoms of COVID-19 (see above).
- You have had close contact (within 6 feet of an infected person for at least 15 minutes) with someone with confirmed COVID-19.
- You have been asked or referred to get tested by your health care provider.

Where should I get tested for COVID-19?

Clinic and mobile testing sites are available in San Francisco and the East Bay.

Carbon Health has both clinic and mobile testing available across the Bay Area. Appointments are required and a full listing of locations is available online: carbonhealth.com/coronavirus

CityHealth has testing options in centers in San Francisco and San Leandro. Appointments are required and must be made online. Visit bayareacovid19testing.com for details.

GoHealth/Dignity are assessing patients through virtual visits scheduled online and, if needed, scheduling appointments at one of their centers open for testing: www.gohealthuc.com/bayarea
